Hamzeh Natsheh is a master glass-blower who heads his family business, Hebron Glass, along with his son, Hamdi. Residing in the Palestinian city of Hebron, the largest on the West Bank, the Natsheh family makes a range of translucent glass products with waves of colors reminiscent of the sea, sky, and desert. Natsheh traces his family's history of glass-blowing to the first half of the 19th century, but the craft has roots in the area dating back to 122-330 CE. Hebron Glass produces functional glassware dishes, bowls, pitchers, and vases, as well as jewelry and beads.
